2 weeks until ENIC NORTH 2023 conference, Glasgow, Monday 15 May

There are just two weeks left to book for ENIC NORTH, our one-day conference on Monday 15 May in Glasgow. Use the booking form to secure your place.

ENIC NORTH gives you opportunities to meet and talk with experienced peers, on practical issues of concern, and to listen to a wide variety of speakers discussing developments that affect your institution. Themes include:

- What students really want, with input from UKCISA student ambassadors
- Managing applications from new and existing markets
- Readiness for study, with a focus on English and maths
- Differentiating your brand so that your institution stands out.

The keynote address comes from Rachel Sandison, Deputy Vice-Chancellor, External Engagement at University of Glasgow.

Other speakers and panellists include: Rory McDiarmid, Head of the Recruitment and International Office, University of Strathclyde: Getting the right students from new and emerging markets; Ivar Moller, Deputy Director of Admissions, University of St Andrews: How to manage an influx of applications; and Emma Gilmartin, Head of Social Media & Student Communications, University of Glasgow: Community building and new approaches to HEI branding.

Details of all sessions, speakers and timings are in the conference programme [PDF]. ENIC NORTH takes place at the Technology and Innovation Centre, University of Strathclyde, Glasgow, minutes from mainline rail stations.

Our conference partners are Password English Language Testing.

ENIC NORTH is presented in association with AECC Global, Cambridge University Press & Assessment, and ApplyBoard.

The event is supported by UniQuest, Skills for English, Enroly, Gecko, Dialexy, OMPT,

Bespoke training opportunities 16-19 May, part of ENIC NORTH 2023

From 16 to 19 May, as part of our ENIC NORTH 2023 extended programme, the UK ENIC team will be available for bespoke training to members and non-members in the North.

We can deliver at your preferred location, and at a time at your convenience (face-to-face, online, or a mixture) and tailor the sessions to meet your institution or organisation's needs.

We will be operating on a 'first come, first served' basis for these sessions, so if you are interested, do get in touch as soon as possible.

Safeguarding trust in higher education: webinar on academic integrity

UK ENIC took part in a webinar, now available to view, focusing on ways to address threats to academic integrity. It was organised by the International Network for Quality Assurance Agencies in Higher Education (INQAAHE).

With developments in IT bringing new challenges to academic integrity, the session aimed to raise awareness about different forms these threats can take, and the responses available to the international education community.

Online Professional Recognition Forum moves to new platform

There is a new way to access the online Professional Recognition Forum, which is designed to support people who deal with applications for the recognition of professional qualifications and with issues of international mobility for professionals.

The UK Centre for Professional Qualifications (UK CPQ) administers the Forum, which is now available as part of LinkedIn. It provides a place to read articles, get information, engage in open discussions, network with like-minded colleagues, engage with experts, share ideas and concerns, and promote best practice.

The Forum is managed in LinkedIn as a 'closed group' which simply means you will need to be invited to join. If you have professional recognition responsibilities, or work within a professional body or regulator and have not yet received an invitation, please contact the UK CPQ team by email at ukcpq@ecctis.com to receive an invitation link.
